enanges and to the bearings of this attitude on future relations be tween a the Kremlin and the present regime in Cairo. The alacrity with which the Seviest Union to the new Syrian Government, for example, posses several important questions. Soviet recognition to the new Syrian Government, for example, posses several important questions. Soviet recognition of the Kuzbari regime of Seturday, few oldys after President Nasser announcement that he would not stand in the way of Syria's admission to the United Nations. and the United Nations of Syria's admission to the United Nations. and the United Nations of Syria's independence than it is extremely doubtful Infact, it is more than likely that the opposite is true. For the Communist movement is statement, and considerate the united Nations of Syria's independency in the United Nations of Syria's independency of Syria's independency of Syria's independency of Syria's independency of Syria'

Quite apart from this might not in the end affect the agreements on the building of both stages of the High Dam at Aswam whereby Mosco will be recommended to civilians air traffic and 50 katangese gendarmes will resume their duties there. One point of disagreement detechnical assistance. This question becomes even more relevant, and for Cairo no doubt rather pressing, if we take into account, reports coming out of the Soviet Union indicating that Moscow is about to revise its aid policy in a way that would mean withheld. about to revise its aid po-licy in a way that would mean withholding such aid from countries which. though "non-aligned" in their foreign policies, pursue a policy of suppression of their local Commun-ists. According to this ists. According to this revision, reported to be ready for adoption by the 22nd Congress of the Soviet Communist Party to be convened within the coming few days, the Kremin will from now on make its aid conditional on the recipient's willingness to allow unrestricted freedom for local Communist activity.

freedom for local Communist activity.

But whether or not these reparts are authentic. Moscow's attitude towards Abdul Nasser has been showing, signs of positive lack of respect and regard. Soviet action in resuming atomic weapon teats, which came on the very eve of the opening of the Conference of non-aligned states in Beigrade, can now be seen in perspective as tantamount to a slap in the face for Nasser himself, who had taken a leading role in convening the conference.

Alow, in face of the total idiarcard of his feelings with which recognition was extended to the Damascus regard as a sof restoring his favoured position with Moscow. For some time now, reports have been circulating that the Soviet Government wants to get rid of Nasser, whom it has come to regard as too presumptious, and that it would like to see him replaced by the more manageable Marshal Abdul Hakim Amer, his Deputy and War Minister. The Syrian affair, which Amer is said to have wanted to conduct with far more mederation and wisdom but in which he failed owing to Naszer's obstinacy, has already produced a certain amount of animosity a between these transitives and the transitives of the state of the Greatest Imperialist Country'

BRIGHTON (AP). — Prime Minister Macmillan expressed hope yesterday that a basis for negotiating the Berlin crisis may be uncovered by means of the patient diplomacy being used by the Western powers.

He declared that the explosive Berlin issue "may provide the first real test" of Soviet desires to ease international tension.

Mr. Macmillan told 5,000 delegates ending a five-day Conservative Party conference that the legeological struggle between the free world and its belief in God, and atheistic Communism "may last for another generation — perhaps even longer."

Uitimately, he said, the hope of the world must rest on the chance that Communism's "wicked and cynical doctrines will gradually change and lose their ferwency and strength. Then Communist countries may begin to develop into more normal civilizations, recovering a moral basis for their life."

The Game and The Player

By Paul Kobn

FOOTBALL is the spice of life

lions in every corner of the globe. In this country, too, love of the game-has gripped tens of thousands of Israelis who are ready to pay any price to see a game. Fans consider the money well spent so long as the players give of their best. Even those who do not make the journey to the Ramat Gan Stadium for an international match or trudge to see the local league or trudge to see the local league matches, will take more than a casual interest in how our footballers fare against Italy in the World Cup game

IN Italy, football is big business. Italian clubs spend fortunes — £100,000 is no longer an unusual sum for a transfer fee — for star footballers from Britain, Argentina, Spain, Sweden, and other countries, and in turn these players set the turnstiles clicking. Clubs pay their players fabulous sums, and the top players in Italy receive a hun-dred pounds sterling a week, plus bulky ressionals, for the term 'amateur in aport today is a very broad one. Under any definition, the situation of some of Israel's footballers is intolerable. Who would believe that Gideon Tisch, wearing the No. 6 shirt at Ramat Gan, a footballer who has defended Israel in over 20 international games, is without employment, and has been so for five months. Aharon Amar and Abraham Menczell, perhaps the country's two finest footballers, earn Eli88 and IL210 bonuses for wins,

THE results of this situation are well known, Rafi Levy and Moshe Haldi, players who would automatically have appeared against Italy today, are in faroff Australia. There they are under con tract and have assured jobs with a de cent wage. Certainly no one can say of Rafi Levy that he did not make everyone aware of his financial position, before he left Israel. The national team captain. Nahum Stelmach, was persuaded only at the last minute not to follow suit. Several other players received offers from abroad — and continue to receive blame Israel's players? Strangely enough it is the F.A. which talks most vociferously of sanctions against players who depart. One may ask what the F.A. has done to improve the players lot? Apart from the question of their "fu-ture" when their playing days are over-surely the local stars should be assured of a decent living wage whilst playing international soccer. No footballer can play his best if he has legitimate finanreceive fees for playing, but are there really no company managers willing to employ football stars, at the same time being broad-minded enough to permit them the leave necessary for training and matches?

IF indeed we are so poor in soccer-minded executives, it should not be below the dignity of the Government sports authority to intervene on behalf of Israel's international footballers. Perhaps professionalism or semi-professio soccer is the answer. If current cor tions continue to prevail, Israel's foot-ball if most certainly doomed to mark time - a sure guarantee for shameful

Asian countries which have noticeably flouted established press freedoms this year. The IPI, which has been described as "a watchdog of press freedom." had difficulty deciding in which country it should establish its Asian hendquarters.

It chose Kuala Lumpur for its relative freedom from harsh press laws and because the Malayan capital shares with nearby Singapore the benefit of one of the most technically advanced English-language newspaper groups in Asia.
